Nash Delivers on Promise to Provide Quality Grocery Store in District

Councilman Troy Nash was joined by store owners and other officials for the ribbon-cutting ceremony of the new Save-A-Lot grocery store at 3410 Troost.

City Councilman Troy Nash recently celebrated the grand opening of the Save-A-Lot grocery store. The site located at 3410 Troost is the former home to the City of Kansas City's codes division. For too long, the urban core has lacked a quality grocery store. The Save-A-Lot store will provide its customers with many choices, including meats, fresh vegetables, produce and dairy products.

For the past year, Councilman Nash has been working with Illinois to bring them to Kansas City. "During the last election, the number one priority of neighborhood and community residents was a safe, clean, affordable grocery store. When I would ask people what they wanted in their neighborhood, they said a quality grocery store. With the help of city staff, neighborhood and community residents, a quality grocery store is now open in the inner-city," said Councilman Nash.

From three stores in 1977 to more than 500 stores in over half the country today, Save-A-Lot is poised to meet the growing demands of a growing market. The Save-A-Lot grocery store chain is one of the most successful in the country — highly efficient and highly productive. With the average Save-A-Lot store operating in about 12,000 square feet, as opposed to the 50,000 to 70,000 square feet of major supermarkets, a lot of the overhead is eliminated, thereby lowering prices of products. In addition, Save-A-Lot stores are unique in other ways, clearly setting them apart from competition. Very few national labels are sold. Instead, custom label products dominate Save-A-Lot aisles.
