

THE KANSAS CITY GLOBE

Serving Metropolitan Kansas City, Missouri and Kansas for Over 28 Years

Vol. 28 No. 46 globe@kansascity.com 40 CENTS WEEKLY PUBLICATION THUR., NOV. 23, 2000 — WED., NOV. 29, 2000

Nash Honors Tutu

On November 10, City Councilman Troy Nash traveled to Hong Kong, China to present the Eisenhower Medallion to South African Archbishop Desmond Tutu, along with members of the Board of Directors of People to People International. The Eisenhower Medallion is the highest award bestowed by the organization. Councilman Nash has been a member since 1994 and is a member of the worldwide Board of Directors. continued on page 2A

From left: Kansas City, Missouri Councilman Troy Nash, Arch Bishop Desmond Tutu and board members of People to People International.

Nash Honors

continued from page 1A

Directors.

Archbishop Desmond Tutu has been one of the leading figures in the fight against apartheid in South Africa and is a man of enormous moral authority and courage. I used the opportunity to explain to him what we are doing locally to bring people together with our ONE Kansas City initiative on race," said Councilman Nash.

Tutu was chosen by President Mandela to chair South Africa's Truth and Reconciliation Commission, and investigate the crimes committed by all sides during the apartheid regime. Desmond Tutu became the first black Anglican Dean of Johannesburg in 1975. Under his vigorous leadership, the church in South Africa became immersed in the political struggle. Tutu constantly told the government of the time that its racist approach defied the will of God and for that reason could not succeed. Tutu has strived to remain outside party politics and always used the Bible as his text, saying God decreed all Africans were equal. In 1985, he was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize because of his quest for a non-violent end to apartheid. His long crusade began to bear fruit when the reforming PW de Klerk became President. Desmond Tutu encouraged him to take chances, and the African National Congress was unbanned.

Tutu has said that he has been "appalled at the evil we have uncovered". But he said it had been a "privilege" to be part of the process of "trying to heal a traumatized and wounded people". Although the cloak of secrecy has been lifted, the revelations have stoked anger in South Africa and Archbishop Tutu has admitted that reconciliation will not be easy. The process has also taken its toll on the 64-year-old Tutu who suffered prostate cancer last year.

It was for his active participation to work with all sides that earned him the award, which fulfills President Eisenhower's vision. President Dwight D. Eisenhower founded People to People International in 1956. He held a White House Conference and invited America's cultural, educational, sports and business leaders to attend. Among these early leaders of People to People were William Faulkner, Jesse Owens, Norman Rockwell, Walter Cronkite, Arnold Palmer, Walter Annenberg, Joan Crawford, Bob Hope and Walt Disney. The program to advance tolerance and world peace was called the "President's People to People Program."

Today, there are over 20,000 documents concerning PPP at the Eisenhower Library and Museum, in Abilene, Kansas. In 1961, People to People became known as People to People International (PTPI), and it relocated its Headquarters to Kansas City, Missouri, with the assistance of Joyce C. Hall, founder of the Hallmark Corporation. PTPI has more than 200 Chapters in some 39 nations around the world.